

Clinical Response to Domestic & Family Violence

Course Overview

This online module 'Clinical Response to Domestic and Family Violence' is an information resource that will help all health service employees, both clinical and non-clinical, in the public and private health sector to respond appropriately to disclosure of DFV.

This module builds on a health professionals understanding of DFV and provides advice on how to respond in the clinical setting. At the end of this module you will be able to:

- Explain the complexities of DFV
- Identify individuals experiencing, or at risk of experiencing, DFV
- Recall the six-step sensitive inquiry model
- Demonstrate confidence and capability in intervening safely and sensitively
- Understand and describe the circumstances in which health workers may share and receive client information to increase safety and reduce risk
- Describe your role in offering referrals to specialist and support services.

This course is designed for midwives and other health professionals who provide maternity care to women in Australia.
