

Working With Women Who

Working with people who are LGBTIQ

Ashley Scott

Ashely Scott is the Executive Officer of Rainbow Families, and a proud gay dad of two girls. Ashley is passionate about equality and inclusion for LGBTIQ+ parents and their families and works to build a supportive community for families, and to ensure that mainstream services are inclusive of diverse families.

Rachel Reid

Rachel is a midwife and child and family health nurse with a passion for supporting families from conception to five years. She has international clinical experience, a background in health promotion, perinatal research and antenatal education. Since 2018 she has been part of the Rainbow Families antenatal education team and co-facilitates the Rainbow Babies supported postnatal group. She is part of the LGBTIQ+ community and lives with her wife and their 3 children in Sydney.

Bridget Muir

Bridget (they/she) is a Queer parent and passionate about inclusion and accessibility. Bridget's background is social work and community development. Bridget has previously volunteered as a trained breast-feeding/chestfeeding peer supporter in Wanaka, New Zealand, and has also previously been a volunteer accredited breastfeeding/chestfeeding counsellor with La Leche League Australia.

Working With Women Who

Bridget has been a volunteer with Rainbow Families NSW for 4 years. Bridget is the Rainbow Families project lead & representation for a partnership lactation project with the Australian Breastfeeding Association specifically for LGBTQIA+ Parents that is will be launched in 2021.