

Working With Women Who

Working with women who are incarcerated

Bridget Ferguson, RN/RM, BNurs, MMID, MPH.

Bridget is a registered nurse and midwife, currently employed as a midwifery lecturer, teaching into the Bachelor of Midwifery (graduate entry) at Central Queensland University. Bridget has worked as a clinical midwife, nurse and educator throughout Queensland, Papua New Guinea, the United Kingdom, Saudi Arabia, and Bermuda. She is an alumni of James Cook University, having graduated with a Master of Midwifery and a Master of Public Health. Bridget is currently undertaking a PhD at CQUniversity. Her professional interests lie in global health, universal health care, human rights, supporting vulnerable women from diverse cultural backgrounds and capacity building the midwifery profession to improve outcomes for mothers and babies.

Tanya Capper, Registered Midwife, Dip/HE Midwifery, GradDip Midwifery, MMid, LL.B, PhD Candidate

Tanya is a registered midwife with over 23 years of international midwifery experience. She qualified as a midwife in England, UK in 1997 and has enjoyed a number of diverse midwifery roles since then. Tanya has also practised as an HIV Specialist midwife in Central London, has held senior roles in a standalone birth centre, and a number of birth suites in UK NHS trusts. Since moving to Australia Tanya has worked nationally in tertiary settings in all areas of maternity care.

Tanya now is the Head of Course - Bachelor of Midwifery (Graduate Entry) at Central Queensland University and is based in Brisbane and has recently completed her doctoral study which explored the experience of being bullied as a midwifery student whilst on clinical placement.

Working With Women Who

Dr Adele Baldwin

Dr Baldwin is a registered nurse and midwife with extensive clinical and academic experience across a diverse range of nursing and midwifery topic areas. Dr Baldwin's research interests are twofold: improving health outcomes and preparing the future health workforce. She is a valued team member working with multidisciplinary teams across multiple organisations, building evidence that enhances the quality of healthcare provided to those who require it, as well as contributing to preparation of nurses and midwives to provide the care.